GOTHIC ARCHITECTURE.

We see no good reason why Gothic architecture should not have as fair a trial among our civic buildings as all the other styles to which we are accustomed. In a city which-contemptuous of the stately but monotonous dignity of whole streets and squares designed after one pattern, as in Paris, Munich, or modern Edinburgh-apparently aims only at as much variety as possible; where each man tries to make his building overtop instead of range horizontally with his neighbor's; where every strange innovation must have a still stranger one placed alongside, and every Mansart roof that dares to lift its assuming head must be immediately out-mansarted by its next-door neighbor, surely every style on earth can have a show, if possessing any intrinsic beauties to recommend it. And what style is more prolific in ingenious and artistic thought than the Gothic? We are told that it is of too gloomy and monastic a character, that it savors too strongly of the dark ages, and is not at all adapted to our modern modes of living. But if we can bend the ponderous Egyptian to our uses, in a monstrosity like the Tombs,-the Grecian (which knew nothing of plate-glass or the use of the arch) into all sorts of modifications to suit our dwellings,-the Moorish and others, all derived from states of society more foreign to us than the English in the time of the Tudors, why may we not also take the rich indigenous architecture of our trans-Atlantic ancestors and adapt its beautiful forms and combinations to our present wants?

How far this may be done we have a prominent illustration of at hand, in the excellent architectural improvements of our Central Park. Whothat looks at any of those well-formed archways, those cunningly contrived abutments and recesses, adapted everywhere to the formation of the ground itself, those spicy little touches of well-considered enrichment that surprise one at every turn, but is struck by the richness of any style that can admit of such pleasing variety. The art which can invest bridges, palisades, rural cottages, and even blank walls, with so much interest can certainly do the same when applied to commercial buildings in our principal thoroughfares, if the hand of the artist be there.

Although upon a comparatively small scale, the best attempt of the kind which has yet come to our notice is Decker's piano store, lately erected on the western side of Union square from design of Leopold Eidlitz. Everything about this little front:- the bold arrangement of the stoop at the entrance,-the pleasing sunk paved space leading to the store below, and occupied by Brentano's literary emporium, -the variety of ingenious forms adopted for windows in the several stories,-the distribution and meaning of the ornamentation,-the tasteful combination and contrasts of different stones and brick work,-all exhibit traces of artistic thought and skill. The windows are large and wide enough for all the purposes for which they were intended, and although the architect has freely availed himself of the pointed arch, the mouldings and other ornamental forms of Gothic architecture, there certainly is nothing either gloomy or monastic about the building.

An «pparent rival has just appeared in a new narrow front now approaching completion on Fifth avenue, near Twenty-third street. This example-designed, we believe, by Mr. PfeifFER, does not at all compare with the former in taste or judgment, and is calculated to draw attention more by its grotesqueness than by any beauty of Gothic art which it displays. The tour de force of this front seems to have been reserved for a queer oriel window-if such it can be called-projecting from the fourth story and, towering independently above the roof, with conical slate covering which is to be crowned with an immense sign. This window is of most extraordinary and uncouth shape, being formed of only two sides sloping together to a sharp angle in front at an angle of 45 degrees, and arched below in the most clumsy and incomprehensible manner, so as to escape the centre windowhead of third story. We were relieved when we found that a large portion of the superstructure of this assumed stone"oriel was being made of wcod instead of solid stone, for we did not otherwise understand how such an arch could carry the weight to be put upon it. Such freaks in design, defying all well-known and obvious laws of construction, are, at best, but mere architectural legerdemain, and may well succeed in being stared at, but can never be admired; certainly never help to popularize Gothic architecture in our streets.

THE NEW YORK CLUB.

THe inevitable hand of progress has been laid upon Fifth avenue, and almost daily we find the uprooting of some old landmark there, which, when planted, seemed destined to remain for a far longer period of time. The latest of these changes is caused by the voluntary dissolution of the New York Club, after an existence of twenty-five years. The headquarters of this club was at the fine brownstone mansion of Richard K. Haight, on the southeast corner of Fifth avenue and Fifteenth street, where they located themselves in 1861, on removing from the corner of Astor

Place and Broadway, which they had occupied ever since their foundation in 1845. Some idea of the increase in the value of property in the neighborhood of their last mansion can be gleaned from the fact that the rental, which in 1861 was $$ 5,000$, had gradually risen up to $$ 18,000$. The house is now undergoing alterations for the purpose of converting it into independent flats, upon what is known as the European system, for the purpose of accommodating such families as are willing to pay high prices for elegant and luxurious suites of apartments. That these prices will run very high in such a locality is naturally to be expected, from the great value which the ground can command for business purposes.
It is singular that while so much is being done, in many of the most expensive localities in the city, towards accommodating several families conveniently under one roof, the improvements should have hitherto been carried out on a scale only intended to meet the requirements of those who are able to pay comparatively high rentals. These rentals for suites of apartments range, in many instances, as high as $$ 1,000$ and $$ 1,500$ per annum, and even higher; and it is all but impossible to obtain such conveniences as we allude to for $$ 750$. But there are thousands of families in this city, of the highest respectability and refinement, who are really not able to pay more than $$ 400$ or $$ 500$ for house rent; and for this large and valuable portion of our population no adequate provision seems to have been hitherto made beyond the miserable accommodations of ordinary tenement houses. There is no reason whatever why the same accommodations-on a less expensive but equally convenient scaleshould not be provided for this class of our population as well as for those of larger means; and if the impediment lies in the costliness of land in our best localities, surely a remedy could easily be found in erecting buildings of the same character, but less expensively, on land of less value in the city, or in the most accessible portions of Brooklyn, Hoboken, and other immediate and desirable suburbs.

REAL ESTATE MARKET.

To judge from the tone of the daily press of this city, one would come to the conclusion that the bottom of the market had fallen out entirely, and that holders of real estate were beginning to think of paying a preminm to any one who would be rash enough to take their real estate off their hands, and pay the taxes and assessments. Undoubtedly the views of holders of real estate have been considerably morlified within the last thirty days; and more reasonable figures are named for many pieces of property heretofore held at fancy prices, and buyers are exercising more care in regard to in. vestments, being more influenced by the present value of property, and the income which can be derived from it, than by the views of speculators as to what it may be in years to come. Real estate agents report a good demand, and saî that all property in first-class locations mects with a ready sale.
It is reported on the street that the managers of the Lorillard estate will soon put npon the market a large line of their properts, situated on the upper paxt of the island. The sale is to be munaged by one of the most energetic real estate brokers on the island, and who is noted for the cuscess usually attending his schemes.

MARKET REVIEW.

BRICKS.-A continued firm and somewhat bnoyant tone prevails in the market for North River hards, and though values are not remarkally high or likely to advance very decidedly from current figures the general position appears to be quite satisfactory to sellers, and they evidently hope to hold their own to the close of the season. Buyers, generally, now scem more inclined to operate, and are in some instances showing considerable, anxiety, as there is danger that the supplies may shut off somewhat sudadenly, the more so that the weather has thus far been so mild as to lead to the belief in a proballe severe cold spell when the freezing point is reached, and a consequent closing of the river: Holding back supplies is still in order with a are inclined to forward stock find their movements some what retarded, owing to the scarcity of transportation facilities, many of the regular sloops having hanled off to repair, ete., during the winter, and the supply of barges not being large enough to accommodate all who desire to nse them. There is a goodly supply of stock accumulated at the points of production upon which we can draw so long as there is no check to navigation, but with the ordinary course of events it is probible that a great many lots must be carried over until spring. be carried over until spring. City distributive denlers aro now taking in stock as fast as opportunity will admit, and the larger contractors are also buying for use within a month or two, while the sales for immediate consumption have to the ordinary average, the recent mild weather with all speed. the pushing forward of building operations with all speed. As we close, the market is firm and the effort is being made to get stock down river" that every of ruling values. CEMENT.-There is more nniformity in the condition of affairs in this market, and business now appears quite good on all sides. The season is arawing rapidly to a close, manufacturers are in a hurry to complete contracts, dealers begin to think it about time to finish getting in their stocks, and, taken altogether, quite a show of life is the result. There is no reckless or even liberal purchasing to result. There is no reckless or even liberal purchasing to be noticed, however, buyers of all classes confining thembe noticed, however, buyers of all classes confining themselves closely to positive orders or actual wants, when selves closely to positive orders or actual wants, when operating for early consumption, and, on parcels taken for operating for early consumption, and, on parcels taken for use after the river has closed, a close calculation is made as to probable necessities. The price is strong and well as to probable necessities. The price is strong and well sustained, with pretty much all the brands now able to realize $$ 1.90$ per bhl delivered here. Eastern and Southern shipments continue; a considerable parcel has been taken for California, and some export orders have yet been filled. The mills continue the production, and are not likely to cease while an opportunity remains for shipment. We note exports of 200 bbls to Brltish N. A. Colonies: 6 bbls to Hayti.

HAIR.-The market for plasterers' hair has undergone no very important variation of late, the general quotations has proved equal to all calls thes fairly active. The stock continne, dealers do not appear to think it advisable to seek an advance just yet, and we anticipate no change until after the commencement of the new year at least. bution is as before, confined mainly to local wants, dition for stock by the regular trade or for immediate use by the large consmmers. The fine weather kept up the production in the country rather later than ustal, and there is considerable stock to come in, though not an excess. Goat of prime quality is quite scarce, all the best lots having been selected out on special orders. pect out on special orders.
LATH.-During the period under review there has been little or no variation in the general position of this market, mand, and prices having apparently reached a point where mand, and prices having apparently reached a point where neither buyer nor seller can gain any important variation. City distributive dealers are the principal burers, and many are laying away their winter supplies. but they do not appear quite so anxious as a few weeks aro, and far less so than during previous years. Indeed, in a number of instances, it has lately come to light that a portion of last summer's purchases is still on hand, and that ordinary winter accumulation a can now be made up by the addition of comparatively small quantities. Still, as all the lath thus far offered have been sold without mnch difficulty, and likely to come to hand, receivers natnrally feel somewhat confident and insist upon full rotes, with now and then an opportunity presented for obtaining something over quoted figures in view of special deliveries, at rather more haste ny stock on sale, and the market has a firm tone, at $$ 2.50$ per M, with sales for the week of 650,000 at the above rate.

Lew buyers - The demand is rery fair, on the whole, with a few buyers now and then to be found who are just the least quick, and the arrivals are very, but the call is far from quick, and the arrivals are very little behind the outlet. three months has not as yet taken place, or at least is not announced ; but there is little donbt that as soon as circumstances will admit an advance will be brought about, on common in particular, as this is now figured down to a cost leaving little margin for profit to the producer, parmulation of supplies in yard as have increased. The accuslowly for a long time, and is now large enough to meet any probable distributive demand, but some digh to meet been rather neglectful, and may have to pay higher for their goods should they be compelled to pay higher for chases. On the State lime the previously noted unsettled feeling continues, and business can only be called fair but agents do not appear quite so anxious to operate at present in view of the carly closing of the canals, and the srutting. off of cheap comnunication with the kilns. As we close the current quotations are $\$ 1.15$ per bbl for common, and LUMBER.-We do not find that buyers are any more plenty at the yard.on.either the East or West sides of the city, and the retail lumber trante remains in a generally slow, sluggish condition. There are naturally a few exceptions to aggregate of sales from day to day, but even in this case the call is from regular sources, and in many cases of such a character as to be almost cartain, even were all other outlets closed. We have no desire to make the market appear in an unfavorable light, but must tell the truth, and there is no covering up the flat and unsatisfatory position of affairs at present prevailing. Holders, under the circumstances, show present prevailing. Holders, under the circumstances, show $\imath$ very fair amount of confidence, and though willing to accept reasonable terms are notat all inclined to sacrifice the stock, which is a good one and will not deteriorate by keeping. At Albany the Eastern buyers are still bnsy, and as the Canals soon close, are hurrying to get the best selections obtainable, inducing the belief that the amount of lumber wintered over will prove small.

Our wholesale dealers, as a rule, have not had much to occupy their attention, owing to comparatively light receipts of unsold stock. There was some demand prevailing for trade, which has had a tendency to preserve at least a uniform tone to values, though we do not hear that either buyer or seller have particularly sought a change. In fact the position appears to be just about this: that there is not much call for goods, and the arrivals keep the ontlet supphed without causing an excess of stock, and it would be difficult to find a point at present upon which to force an advance or a decline. Our city dealers are the principal buyers, but want good stock. For export there is probably a little more demand, but nothing large, and there is now scarcely a possibility that the shipments will reach the aggregate of last year by several million feet.

Eastern Spruce has been less plenty, and most of the current offerings were disposed of without any great difficulty, with all good to prime lots commanding full former figures quickly. The demand, howover, was not sharp, and it is probable that much of an increase of the offering just now be said to be freely stocked; indeed, as evinced by the cale of cargoes as they came to hand, there is some portion of the city dealers who have use for supplies at all times; but a fecling of caution evidently prevails, and buyers are not willing to handle larger amounts than can probably be sold to early advantage. We continue to quote at $$ 18 @ 20$ per M for inferior to prime; $$ 20.50 @ 21.00$ for choice schedules, with special orders delivering at higher figures. Eastern Hemlock is somewhat neglected and nominal, but an occasional call is made at about $$ 15 @ 16$ per M. White Pine is slack and the sale uncertain; though with no receipts to speak of at present; most of the invoices made up tend to lessen the accumulation somewhat. There is enough here, however, to meet a much larger outiet than now appears, and no apparent inclination on the part of holders to ask higher rates, the general market showing a steady tone without buoyancy. Exporters are filling positive orders, but without buoyancy. Exporters are filling positive orders, but refrain from indulging in any speculative shipments. We refrain from indulging in any speculative shipments. We quote at $$ 18 @_{0} 20$ per II for inferior to fair; $$ 21 @ 23$ for quote at $$ 18 \infty_{2} 20$ per MI for inferior to fair; $$ 21 @ 23$ for $$ 26(0.30$ for selections. Yellow Pine has been more plenty partly on contract and partly on sale, with a fair though ot actore and compratively stendy, and we continue to quoto as before and comparatively steady, and-we continue to quote Advices from the South indicato a very good supply avoil Advices from increasing facilities for a very good supply availof cotton freights is now over, and Captains are more willing to make the Southern trip, since the appearance of frost has removed the danger of fevers. For Piling there is not much demand, but as the arrivals are small and not likely to increase, the market has a steady tone, and $5 \% 冈$ f\%e per foot is obtained on the general run, with choice occasionally a little higher.

At Detroit vessels are rapidly lying up, and the demand for tonnage exceeds the supply. Improved rates are being offered, and present prices would have been considered very fair some time since, but as the case stands they attract but little interest.

At Buffalo, freights continue firm.

From St. Stephen, N. B., no new features are reported for the week, except that desirable goods are about exhansted without all the demands being met.
We give below quotations in U. S. currency for regular sizes, but choice lengths on contract are selling much higher and are very scarce

METALS.-Manufactured Copper has been selling rather slowly of late, and the market in a general way was quite duil. A few lots changed hands to supply the wants of the regular trade, but no purchases appeared to be made in excess of the positive wants, and the pretty fair supply accumnlated suffered no great reduction. Holders generally remained steady, however, and previous rates were insisted upon. We quote at $30 @ 31 \mathrm{c}$ for new sheathing ; 22@ 23 c for yellow metal; and $19(1) 19 \% \mathrm{c}$ for old sheathing cleaned. Ingot Copper has met with quite an active demand from the trade, and on speculation, and prices generally improved, the market at the present writing showing much strength and uniformity, with but little stock offering The available supplies are becoming smaller as outstanding lots are gradually being drawn under control, and some of the companies refuse entirely to operate even at the late advance. We quote at 223٪@225c per 1b. Scotch Pis Iron has met with a good demand thronghont, and values were strong and buoyant, but, as noticed last week, small supplies have tended to greatly restrict business. A couple of cargoes came to hand, but afforded very little relief, and orders are now on hand awaiting the next arrivals. We qiote at $\$ 34 @ 36$ per ton according to quality.
